INTERVIEW

Whoever says Cognac, says Courvoisier.

Founded in Jarnac in 1828 by Félix Courvoisier, this historic cognac house was an official supplier to the House of Emperor Napoleon III and many royal courts from the late nineteenth century to the mid-twentieth century.

Today, Courvoisier is recognised as the most awarded cognac house in the world (based on 20 of the best spirits competitions since 2019) with a range of cognacs offering a wide variety of consumption modes, including Courvoisier VS, Courvoisier VSOP, Courvoisier XO and the ultimate expression of the House, L'Essence de Courvoisier. Building on the House's joyful, generous and sophisticated style and its commitment to its community and craftsmanship, Courvoisier continues to enhance its relationships with local artisans and winemakers to produce its cognac collection.

Although its production methods are traditional, the cognac house also incorporates technological innovations at every stage of its processes, as evidenced by the 5 fully automated bottling lines, capable of packaging different types of bottles.

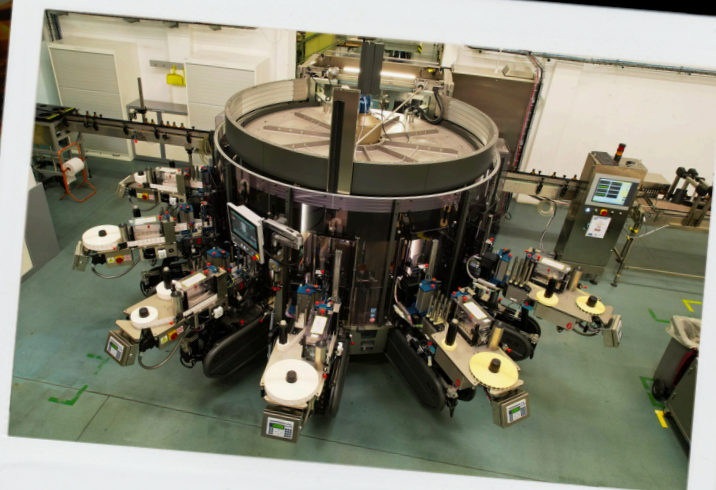

At Courvoisier, the product is at the heart of all attention, a source of great pride that we strive to preserve and enhance. Nevertheless, we recognise that it is the packaging that first catches the consumer's attention.

The quest for excellence and quality has brought Courvoisier closer to P.E. Labellers, giving birth to a new success in the sector of Spirits.

Today, P.E. dresses all Courvoisier bottles from 10 to 50 cl, whether they are double-sided labels or the famous medal inside the petite réserve.
